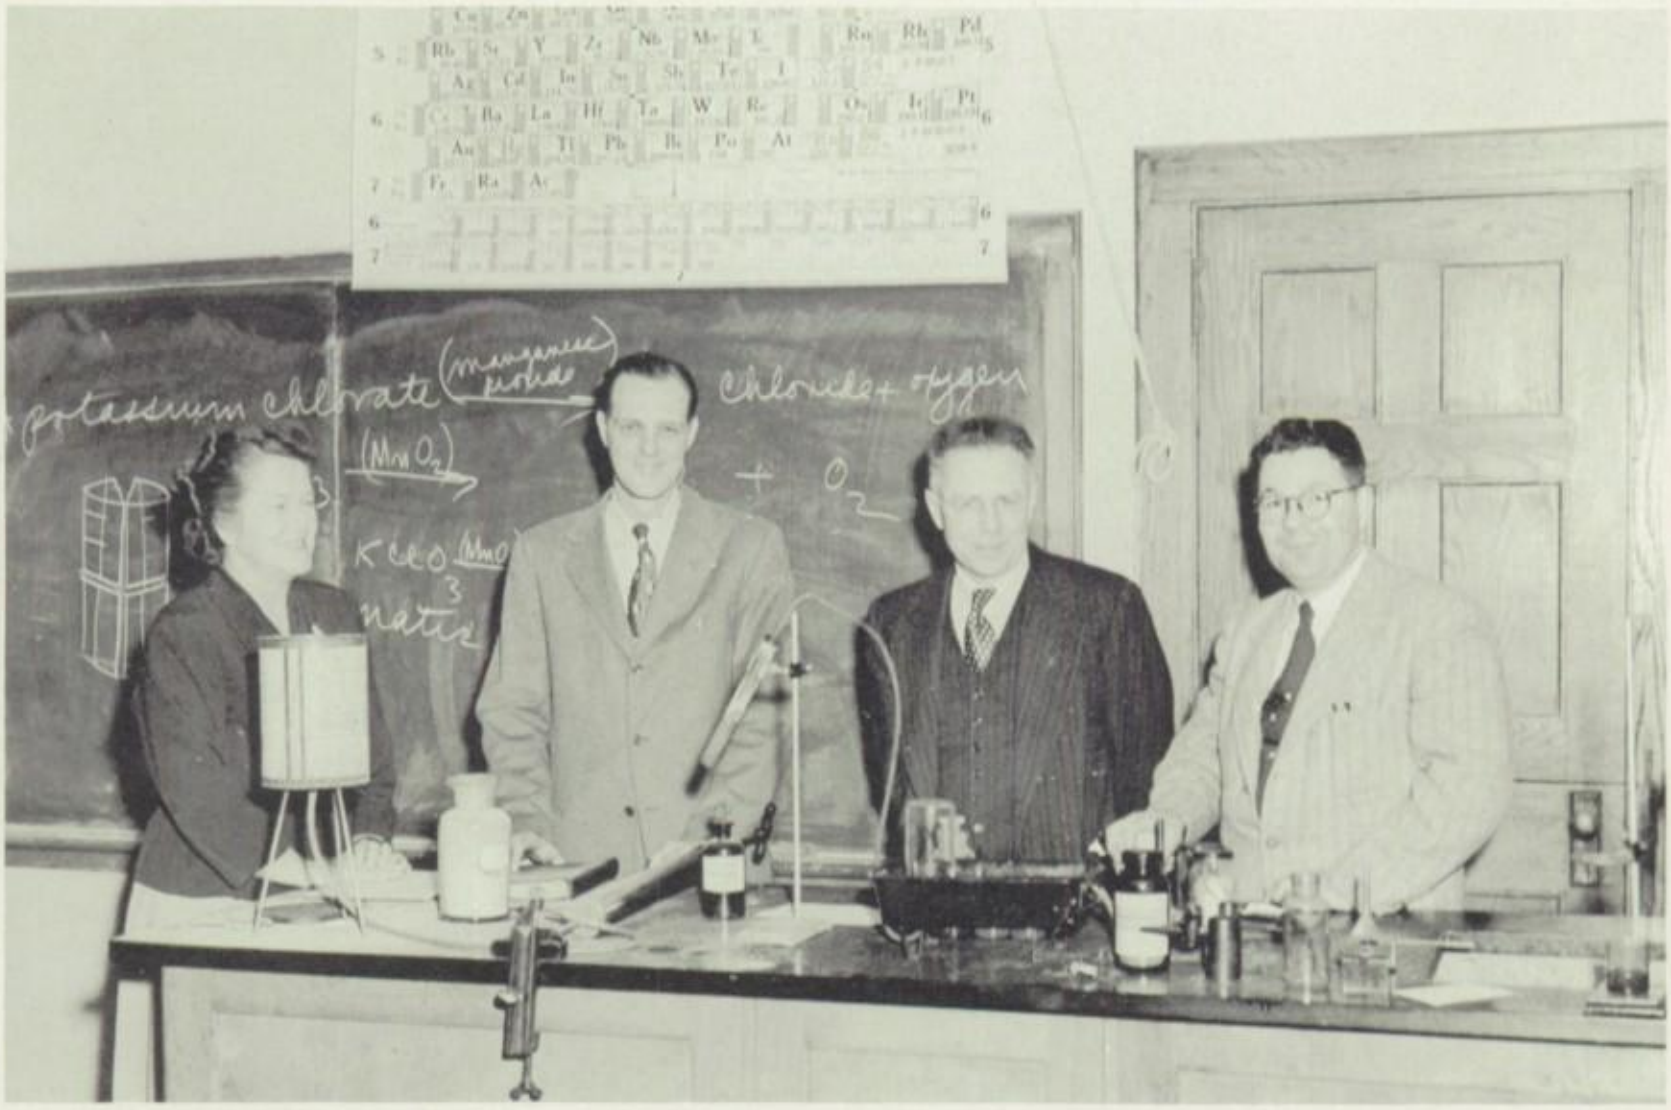
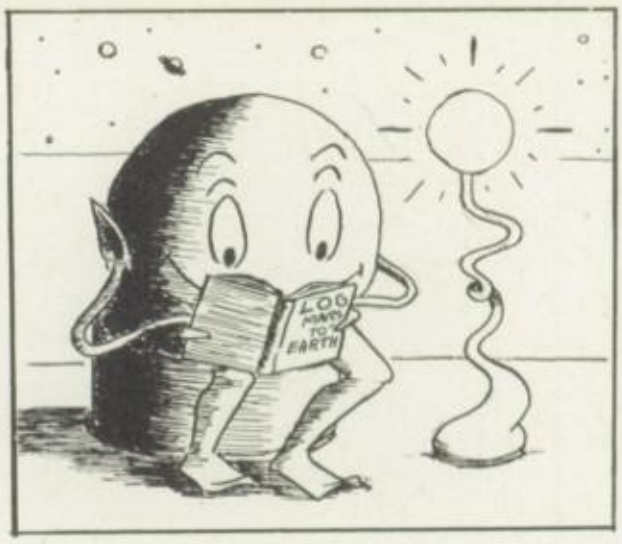
DEDICATION

We, the class of 1952, dedicate our edition of The Top to the Science Department of Summit High School. In this modern world of scientific conquest, we all must have a knowledge of the phenomena which prevail about us. The scientists of tomorrow are the students of today and owe much of their training and inspiration to the stable, undeviating efforts of their teachers. Thanks to the Science Department, we have been kept up-to-date with all new developments in this constantly changing field. Therefore, to you, Edith White, Leonard Roupp, David McNeely, and William Lukens, we, the seniors, in our sincere gratitude, make this fitting dedication in tribute for a job well done.



SCIENCE DEPARTMENT: Edith W. White, David McNeely, Leonard Roupp, and William S. Lukens.

FLASH!



MARTIANS ARRIVE ON EARTH! SUMMIT HIGH HAS INTERPLANETARY VISITORS!

What is this? A flying saucer has just landed outside Summit High School! From this vehicle emerge three weird creatures who introduce themselves as Papa M, Mama M, and Baby M. Papa M announces: "Greetings, Earthlings! We have been waiting so long for you to contact us on Mars, that we've finally taken the first step and come to visit you. We are peaceable, really. What goes on here on this backward planet? How do you Earthlings live?"

What better way could there be of showing the visitors Earthlings' activities than inspecting a busy high school? Come along, then, as we take our strange guests on a tour of Summit High.

Farnum. Rear row: J. Maclay, P. Stromenger, D. Knoop, A. Cattano, W. Lyman, T. Roberts, M. Barker, D. Williams, C. Howard, B. York, K. Giles; Mr. Joseph McClellan.

OFFICERS

Treasurer, Gordon Connelly; Vice-President, Richard Dennis; President, Neil Barker; Secretary, Joanne De Luca.

The Student Council is the most important organization in Summit High School; without it, all co-ordination in school activities would be lost. The Council consists of representatives elected from the various homerooms, General Organization and class officers, and chairmen of all school organizations. Suggestions and valuable advice are given to the group by Mr. Joseph P. McClellan, faculty adviser.

CORRIDOR COMMITTEE

The Corridor Committee, under the direction of Mr. Charles Knipple, faculty adviser, enforces laws regarding corridor courtesies in Summit High. At various posts in the halls, members of this committee may be seen directing traffic around entrances and lockers, and discouraging groups of loitering students. David Carlson was chairman of the Corridor Committee this year.

SERVICE COMMITTEE

The Service Committee consists of seniors and juniors who are selected by their respective classes and a faculty committee. An honorary organization of the G. O., the committee ushers at all school functions and makes and enforces rules to maintain a high moral standard in the school. This year's Service Committee was headed by Don Spitzli, chairman, and advised by Miss Tilla Thomas.

First row: B. Ale, R. Berkelhammer, K. Griswold, T. Cooper, J. DeLuca. Second row: J. Badgley, K. Caruso, J. Lyman, B. Gude, S. Binkley, S. Flagler, D. Hildebrand, S. Little, A. Lamagna, Miss Tilla Thomas. Third row: J. Biggs, J. Maclay, D. Spitzli, K. Giles, B. Lindberg, C. Edwards, G. Hand. Rear row: D. Orth, K. Shoemaker, A. Cattano, P. McGiffin, D. Leamer, M. Barker, D. Guida.

HOUSE and GROUNDS COMMITTEE

The House and Grounds Committee, with the cooperation of the student body, keeps the school clean and neat. Under the direction of Mr. Harry Dampman, faculty adviser, they worked in and around the building, keeping people off the lawns and stopping students from dropping papers around the school. Their work helped to keep our building beautiful.

FIRE COMMITTEE

The Fire Committee works to avoid congestion in case of a fire, sees that everything runs according to the rules of the State of New Jersey Fire and Safety Commission, puts up safety posters, and assures the working order of all fire equipment in Summit High. Under the leadership of the student chairman, Bruce York, the committee divided itself into six groups, each with a leader who saw that all members were on their posts and conducting traffic safely. Mr. Elmore Furth is the faculty adviser.

CAFETERIA CREW

The Cafeteria Crew is composed of students who work in the school cafeteria as waitresses, cashiers, servers, and other helpers. Their work enables the cafeteria to function efficiently. Mrs. Margaret Brauchli, cafeteria manager, is their director.

CAFETERIA COMMITTEE

The Cafeteria Advisory Committee is the only Student Council organization which connects the Junior and Senior High Schools, in that its membership includes representatives of each grade, 7 through 12. One of its main objectives is the collection and analysis of constructive suggestions for improvement of cafeteria procedure and acting in an advisory manner relative to these and other matters. This newly formed committee is headed by Katherine Griswold and Paul McGiffin with Mr. Charles Bogart and Mr. Elmer Haldenwang as faculty advisers.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE

The Assembly Committee has the task of planning and facilitating all the assembly programs for Summit High. Indeed, this committee functions almost entirely behind the scenes, although the results of its work are perhaps the best-known around school. Under the leadership of Tom Roberts, student chairman, and the supervision of Mrs. Helen Davis, faculty adviser, this year's committee was responsible for a wide variety of interesting and entertaining programs.

First row: J. Young, W. Sitarz, T. Roberts, M. Barker, C. Lauer. Second row: Mrs. Helen Davis, J. Maclay, R. Lindberg.

THE TOP

The TOP is Summit High School's yearbook. It provides not only a record of the school year and its memories for students, but also a picture of the school to the general public. College representatives and prospective employers consult the TOP for information about S. H. S. graduates and the school they come from.

A great deal of work on the part of many students goes into the making-up of this yearbook, and the final product reflects the accomplishments of the entire student body. Under the guidance of the faculty advisers, Miss Martha G. Berry, Mr. John C. Tyndall, and Mr. Howard Blumenthal, the editors and staffs strive to produce a book of which all can be proud.

THE TOWER

The Tower, Summit High School's student newspaper, endeavors to keep the student body informed on news of the latest events, fashions, and fads around school. It provides practical experience in journalism, advertising, and sales for those students who work on the Tower staffs. This year's Tower maintained the high standing that has characterized Summit High's newspapers for many years. Judie Shrader was this year's editor, under the guidance of Mr. Wendell H. Woodside, faculty adviser.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

The International Relations Club is composed of students who meet to discuss foreign and domestic problems. Meetings were held monthly for panel discussions and informal talks. Besides these meetings, the club attended two New Jersey International Relations Forums and the Herald Tribune Forum. Arlene Hunt was the club's president, and Mrs. Marie G. Brown is the adviser.

First row: C. Lauer, S. Grasso, S. Smith. Second row: U. Sommer, B. Seiler, G. Goomrigian. Third row: L. Robinson, J. Warren, N. Golding, D. Hildebrand. Fourth row: J. Shrader, N. Poole, D. Smejkal. EL FAROL

The purposes of El Farol, the Spanish Club, are to further students' interests in Spanish-speaking countries and to advance oral use of the language. Members of El Farol are chosen from classes in Spanish II and III. John Hoffman was president of the group this year. Under the able guidance of Miss Elizabeth Carew, faculty adviser, the club held a Mexican Christmas party, a talk on Mexico illustrated with pictures, and a travel talk by native Spaniards.

First row: R. Berkelhammer, J. Melillo, J. Connor, J. Hoffman, A. Waterhouse, D. Hillebrand, Y. Velie. Rear row: R. Grierson, M. Butler, Miss Elizabeth Carew, E. Fuschetti, W. Sitarz, G. Becker, T. Townley, S. Smith, R. Hedberg.

SPORTSMEN'S CLUB

The Sportsmen's Club provides an opportunity for boys interested in hunting, trapping, and fishing to come together and profit by each other's experiences. The club emphasizes the need in our country for drastic conservation measures. The group's many activities include fishing and camping trips and interscholastic fishing meets. Mr. Morton Ashman is the adviser, and Richard Leamer was this year's president.

RED CROSS COMMITTEE

The Red Cross Committee is Summit High School's branch of the American Junior Red Cross. Members of the group carried out the annual drive for funds in November and cooperated with the local Red Cross chapter. Miss Josephine F. Noyes is the faculty adviser, and David Orth was chairman for this year.

First row: F. Duffy, K. Caruso, C. Raymond, J. Connor, B. Flynn, D. Gulamerian, J. Melillo. Second row: A. Hunt, J. Young, B. Ale, M. Colangelo, C. Lauer, H. Harchol, A. Cotterell, N. Poole, J. This year the Science Club divided into groups to take up special subjects, including atomic energy, mental telepathy, photography, spectrum analysis, and ultra-high frequency sound. The meetings varied from demonstrations and outside speakers to movies and trips. Under the able direction of Mr. Leonard Roupp, faculty adviser, and Richard Leamer, club president, the Science Club worked to further the interests of its members in various fields of science.

ART CLUB

The Art Club is made up of art students under the direction of Miss Martha G. Berry, faculty adviser. This group works on special projects, such as costumes and properties for the Christmas pageant and the G. O. Show, and work that is done for the community. The members are usually juniors and seniors chosen from students with particular ability in art.

First row: B. MacAndrews, L. Kennedy, E. St. Jean, J. Marchello, P. Genna, M. Williams, M. Katz, A. Williams. Second row: C. Hogland, F. Mommsen, K. Holden, R. Zotti, M. Grisby, J. Power, Miss Martha Berry. Rear row: J. Mahan, W. Lyman, B. Beveridge.

Here are the winners! Every member of the Girls' Athletic Honor Society has won her letter or numerals for participation in the intramural athletic programs and sports days. Katherine Griswold was this year's chairman. Miss Grace E. Jones is the group's adviser.

PROJECTION CREW

The Projection Crew is comprised of boys who work as assistants to Mr. David E. McNeely, scheduling and showing films for classes and assemblies, as well as managing stage lighting for all auditorium productions. Crew members are selected on a basis of technical aptitude and undergo a period of training for experience.

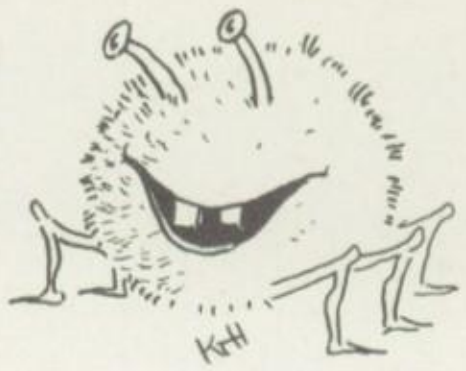
MIMEOGRAPHING CREW

The Mimeographing Crew is a group of volunteers who render service to the school by printing P. T. A. bulletins, election ballots, programs, and other materials for school use. This work gives the students an opportunity to participate in school affairs and eases the work of the office. Miss Irene Hitz is the advisor.

Left to right: Miss Irene Hitz, J. Edwards, I. Lonergan, P. Genna, V. Lepore, N. Buscaino, M. Luciano, J. Marchello, J. Tilton.

Clockwise around table: B. Flynn, H. Reed, N. Muldowney, Mr. Neil Koppenol, J. Cowan, A. Caparoso, M. Quirk, R. Bahto, K. Killoran, D. Gulamerian. Standing: J. Sherry, G. Connelly, V. Gisoldi.



FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT

The Financial Department is composed of Bookkeeping II students under the supervision of Mr. Neil Koppenol. Its purpose is to give students an opportunity to apply bookkeeping principles and procedures to real situations. The members of this department act as treasurers for several of the student activity accounts. Kathleen Killoran was the president of the group this year.

BOOK MART

Twenty-five Senior High School girls, under the organization name of the Book Mart, rendered invaluable assistance in the school library. Without their aid, the work would have been greatly increased. The members of the Book Mart also had opportunities to enjoy parties and a trip to New York. Miss Delia Hadsell and Mrs. Hope McGrady are the faculty advisers, and the president was Doris Gulamerian.

This year's G. O. Show, "The Gondoliers" by Gilbert and Sullivan, was enthusiastically received by its audiences. The satrical plot involved a search by the Duke of Plazo-Toro for the son of the king of Barataria, to whom his daughter Casilda had been wed by proxy in infancy and who, shortly thereafter, had been taken to Venice and wes believed to be one of two gondoliers, Marco and Giuseppe Palmieri. Since both gondoliers had just married, two men were married to three women. While Don Alhambra, the Grand Inquisitor, investigated to determine which gondolier was the rightful king, Marco and Giuseppe ruled jointly in a truly democratic manner. It was finally revealed that the true king was Luiz, attendant to the Duke and secret lover of Casilda. Casilda and Luiz were left to reign in Barataria as the gondoliers and their brides returned to their happy, carefree life in Venice.

MUSIC

During the past year the members of the band and orchestra had many opportunities to display their talents. The sixty piece marching band, accompanied by the twirling squad under the leadership of Patricia Taylor, majorette, added color and spirit to our football games. At assemblies, the whole school entered and left to their music. The band and orchestra rehearsed daily to prepare for their appearances such as the

Rehearsal for Christmas Pageant

The Summit High School Chorus, under the direction of Mr. Daniel Kautzman, is a vital part of the school's activities. After singing for the opening P. T. A. meeting and a school assembly, the group performed for the New Jersey Hi-Y Conference. During the Christmas season, the Chorus presented programs for the school assembly and the Fortnightly Club, sang at Grand Central Terminal, and participated in the annual alumni carol sing. In February the chorus had a major part in the presentation of the 1952 G. O. Show, "The Gondoliers." Chorus activity for the year was completed with the Spring Concert in May and Commencement in June.

GUISE AND DISGUISE

Guise and Disguise, Summit High School's dramatic club, under the direction of Mr. Gerald Crona, faculty adviser, presented two assembly programs this year. The club's other activities included movies, discussions, and a trip to see a Broadway play. Each member assisted in some way with the school productions, helping with acting, prompting, properties, lights, scenery, or make-up. Guided by the president, Cal Howard, and the executive board, the club worked to further interest in dramatics.

Block it, Don, block it!

Summit High fielded a strong soccer squad this year. Playing a difficult ten game schedule, the team emerged with a record of 3 wins, 3 losses, and 4 ties and showed itself capable of rising to great heights. Particularly impressive was the Hilltoppers' performance against Chatham and Kearny, two elevens that perennially dominate the state scene in soccer. Chatham was held to a scoreless tie, and the Kearny outfit was downed 1-0.

The major factor in the team's fine record was its excellent defensive play. As the result of the fine performance of regulars Frank King, Ken Giles, Marty Feibush, Ed Smit, Paul Carlson, Pete Payne, Ted Townley, Bill Dasti, Lou Vispoli, Jack Mahan, Dave Orth, Don Spitzli, and John MacDaniels, the opposition was held to less than a point a game. The efforts of King were recognized by the Newark News, which selected him outside left on its All State soccer squad.

Unfortunately for Coach Holdenwang, all the players from this year's varsity except Smit and Mahan were seniors. However, since Summit had a frosh-soph team this fall for the first time in its history, there will be several experienced competitors next year to fill the vacancies left by graduation.

FOOTBALL

First Row: J. Caporaso, R. Dennis, R. Shivers, R. Zotti, G. Bozzo, D. Peterson, E. Fuschetti, J. Edwards, S. Tillman. Second Row: W. Marcy, mgr., A. Hiltbrunner, B. Beveridge, J. Maclay, J. Because of a plague of injuries to key players, the Maroon and White gridders had a disappointing campaign. Jo Grisby, Ed Fuschetti, Bob Lindberg, Kent Shoemaker, Johnny Biggs, and Paul McGiffin were all casualties. Yet despite these misfortunes the team was able to give a fair account of itself in the Suburban Conference, where it won two games, lost two, and tied one.

The season opened with a sluggishly played tie with Roselle Park. Biggs registered the only Summit touchdown that afternoon on a pass from McGiffin. Two weeks later, against Millburn, the Hilltoppers thundered to their first triumph of the season, overpowering the Millers as the result of three touchdowns in the final half. Highpoint of this uprising was Buzzy Zotti's 55 yard scoring dash on a punt return. The next Summit victory was recorded at the expense of Glen Ridge. Dick Dennis made the lone counter of the game on a pass from Zotti. Summit's final contest of the year, with Caldwell, produced a thrilling 20-20 standoff. Trailing 20-13 in the closing minutes of the contest, the Maroon and White was able to draw to within one point when Vee Grisby grabbed a pass from Gene Bozzo in the end zone. Then Zotti circled end for the vital extra point. Other touchdowns that day were by Zotti and Dennis.

Summit's J. V. boys have been undefeated for the past three seasons, having won eighteen consecutive games. This great record has been run up against tough opposition, for each year Summit plays J. V. squads from Clifford Scott and the five Conference schools. The freshman-sophomore team is the factory where future varsity heroes are produced, although unfortunately in the last few years many of the boys who starred in this competition did not continue, for various reasons. However, it appears that all the boys of this year's eleven will go on to join the varsity. Bright days are just around the corner for Summit High fans!

Perhaps some people will remember the 1951-1952 campaign chiefly as the first year of "the Vee." And it is true that the sensational play of Vee Grisby did furnish a great many of the season's top thrills; Vee racked up 452 points, completely demolishing the record Sonny Dennis set last year—even though Sonny played four games more than Vee. However, no one who followed the exploits of the squad carefully will soon forget the stellar performances of the other key players—Joe Grisby, Tony Petracco, Don Crann, Dickie Dennis, Mac Barker, Walt Shipley, and Jay Badgeley. Unfortunately the Hilltoppers were hampered by a lack of height and were therefore forced to get most of their points by fast breaks. This accounts for several narrow-margin defeats which they encountered, leaving the final record at seven wins and eleven losses.

The season opened with Summit taking four of the first five contests. However, once engaged in Conference play, the squad slipped, losing six straight games. In one of these contests—the first Caldwell game—Vee Grisby set the school and conference record by scoring 42 points in a single game. The next Summit victory was over Madison, when, in the closing seconds, Joe Grisby heaved in a long one-hand shot to secure our win. A few games later, against Millburn, Vee Grisby accomplished the feat of outscoring the entire Miller team, as he tallied 33 points. The rest of the season Summit played on-and-off ball.

This was the last year of competition for Petracco, Crann, Barker, Badgeley, and Joe Grisby. Still Coach Cornog can look forward to an abundance of fine material for next year, both from this year's varsity and the J. V. teams.

Suburban Conference champions, participants in the Greater Newark Tournament—these were the achievements of the Summit High nine for the second year in a row. The team's regular season record was eleven wins and four losses. Unfortunately the Hilltopper's did not fare so well in the tournament, bowing out in the opening round.

As was also the case the year before, the team's success was largely the result of fine pitching and fielding. The outstanding Summit hurler was John MacDaniels, who had an amazing personal record of eight wins and no losses. Behind John was an infield of Mac Barker, Joe Dasti, Fred Swick, and Jim Stortz and an outfield of Kent Shoemaker,* Joe Kenney, and Don Culbertson; Anthony Petracco did the catching. Other players who saw considerable action were Bill Ryan, Johnny Biggs, and Ken Giles.

Although not a heavy hitting outfit, Summit was usually able to get bingles when they were most needed. The highest batting average on the team was sported by Kent Shoemaker.

Individual honor came to Joe Dasti when the Newark News named him second baseman on its All State second team.

Conference		Tie for First

The sixty men who reported for track practice at the start of the season offered Coach Dilson material from which he was soon able to mould a fine squad. This team was unbeaten in all dual competition and showed creditably in all other meets, especially the Conference Meet, where they finished in a tie with Verona. In the State Meet, two Maroon and White athletes especially distinguished themselves—Paul McGiffin, who finished third in the javelin throw, and Paul Carlson, who came in fourth in the 220.

Since the graduation of several former stars, the burden of producing Hilltopper victories this year rested heavily on the shoulders of Paul Carlson, Bob Miles, Bob Shivers, Bill and Dudley Carpenter, and a few other veterans. Last year two new school records were set. George Smith pole vaulted eleven feet three and one-half inches, and Sonny Dennis ran the mile in four minutes and thirty-nine seconds.

Except for the two customary drubbings at the hands of powerful Millburn, the 1951 tennis team was able to hold its own against all foes. The Maroon and White won six games and lost four. Verona and Caldwell were overcome twice each, while engagements with Madison and Glen Ridge were split.

The squad that created this record was made up entirely of sophomores and juniors. Frank King, Pete Payne, and Dick Moyer were the outstanding singles players. John Feldman and Jim Hedberg made up the first doubles combination.

SOPHOMORE HOCKEY

Once again the girls of Summit High have proved that the boys aren't the only athletes in school. These energetic gals have participated in a variety of sports including hockey, basketball, softball, volleyball, badminton, archery, and table tennis. Our hockey and basketball teams all did well in their games with Chatham, Madison, and Millburn. This program of activities was directed by Miss Grace E. CHEERLEADERS

The wonderful school spirit and pep witnessed at sports events this year can be accredited to the ten lively cheerleaders. The girls are chosen each spring on their appearance, pep, coordination, knowledge of the cheers, and ability to do cartwheels. The squad, captained by Joanna DeLuca and coached by Mr. William Lukens, gave encouraging and loyal support to our teams when they needed it most. S. H. S. is truly proud of its cheerleaders, a team that can never be topped!

Sept. 12—Timidly we entered the halls of S. H. S., gazing about us with awe.

Sept. 24—Young and eager, we attended our first football game—the first of many to come. Our class was represented on the bench by George Hand, Jehonias Grisby, and Gene Bozzo.

Oct. 8—Millburn Dance. A few sophomores made it to this successful dance.

Dec. 2—"Stage Door" revealed the great acting ability of Marie Langhorne and Stan Klinck, our two sophs in the show.

Dec. 19—Grand Central echoed with the sound of 100 voices from our mixed chorus.

Dec. 22—Vacation, here we are!

Jan. 2—Back to the grind.

Feb. 17 and 18—Several lusty-voiced '52ers joined in the rollicking production of "Lady Be Good."

Mar. 24—Junior Prom. This evening found our boys staring wistfully at the two beautiful prom queens.

HISTORY

April—Amid tears and smiles Joanna DeLuca, Marie Langhorne, and Joan Melillo were chosen to be three of our pepsters for the coming year.

May—Those old familiar cooperatives descended on us once again.

June—Trembling with fear and apprehension, we crammed for our first high school exams.

June 9—Vacation; Freedom!

JUNIOR YEAR 1950-1951

Sept. 11—We entered the new school and promptly got lost in the bewildering maze of corridors. The sparkling new cafeteria opened its doors. Menu: macaroni and stewed tomatoes.

Oct. 7—After our traditional victory on the gridiron, we journeyed to the Millburn Dance via the D.L.&W. En route we entertained our fellow passengers with enthusiastic renditions of our

S. H. S. songs.

Oct. 26—Stewed tomatoes and macaroni for lunch.

Dec. 1—We sat on the edge of our seats as the complicated plot of "Incognito" unraveled. However, we never quite understood all of it, and we left more confused than ever.

Dec. 22—Classes dismissed. Merry Christmas!

Jan. 1—Happy New Year!

Jan. 3—Classes resumed. Groan!

Feb. 16 and 17—"Finian's Rainbow" convinced us that S. H. S. students cannot be excelled. Frances Duffy and Paul Carlson stole the show.

Mar. 1—"Now, people, you must dig for the facts!" —Mrs. Brown.

March—School spirit rose and we yelled ourselves hoarse at the basketball tournament. Will that team ever be equalled?

Mar. 16—Amid falling stars (and other shaky decorations) "Club 52" opened its doors to the socialites of S. H. S. Frances Duffy was crowned Queen of the Prom and afterwards entertained royally with her songs at the Meadowbrook.

April—Mary Lockhart and Betty Lou Ale were added to the Cheerleading Squad.

May—Sunburned faces appeared in school, both from trips to the shore and trips underneath the sunlamp.

June—We prayed for passing marks on our exams. Some of our prayers were answered.

June 21—Summer and Vacation.

SENIOR YEAR 1951-1952

Sept. 11—Mac Barker, our new G. O. President, welcomed us from the stage of S. H. S. Prediction of things to come: "This boy will make the White House someday."

Sept. 12—Macaroni again.

Sept. 29—First game of the season. As captain of the cheerleaders, Joanna cut a pretty figure.

Nov. 29 to Dec. 2—Hi-Y boys took over the town.
Dec. 21—Joyce Fackiner and Dick Leamer narrated our moving Christmas assembly. At 2:45 we all raced for the doors and almost beat our teachers.
Jan. 2—Leap year came upon us. Of course SENIOR girls don't have to resort to this. (That's a joke!)
January—The Senior Tri-Ep produced the "High Hat Show." John Feldmann and Jean Wyckoff surprised us all with their hilarious version of the Charleston.
Feb. 15 and 16—"The Gondoliers" arrived in great style.
Feb. 16—John Biggs opened his home to half the high school.
Feb. 17—The hospital received a donation of several dozen left-over sandwiches.
Feb. 18—Vacation. This is for rest?

ENDOGENY

By J. J. Clarke

And we—our lives, our loves
In all their terrible importance
Are merely grains of something
Less than sand,
Heaped and molded
By the gigantic hand of fate
On some forgotten, sadly-graying plain.
We must resign ourselves
Each to his separate Hell, or
For all we know, a frivolous zephyr
May, with hideous ease,
Whisk us from our none-too-stable moorings
Up! Up! into the God-knows-where.
Our psuedo-complicated atom to become
For one shimmering hundred thousand years,
A falling star
Dropping through an awesomeness
That knows no time
And, after lighting eternity for one
Split light-second,
That one fleeting eon will be told.

ALL THE ANSWERS

By J. J. Clarke

I am a man,
And yet
I am still a boy
In many ways.
Was it not you, Father,
Who told me solemnly,
"Boys are boys
For such a little hour,
But men are men—forever?"
I never understood
Exactly what you meant,
But I smiled
And said I did.
Then you looked at Mother,
"Protege'," you said . . . .
Oh, I have seen through people,
Through them till I found the one
Through whom I could not see.
This man held out his hand
To me.
(Or did I hold mine out
To him?)
I am old,
And yet
I am still young
In many ways.
Was it not you, Mother,
Who answered
When I asked of trite things
Such as Youth and Life,
"Childhood is a land where
Frogs die
And dogs die
But love and laughter never die,"
You said.
And you seemed very proud of me—
Proud of me indeed.
I should have whispered in your ear
How I never understood . . . .
Oh, I have listened
To your jokes
(You know, the ones
You said
Would curl my hair)
And I laughed
A dry, helpless laugh
And you thought it
Time for bed . . . .
But I can still
Hear your jokes—
A boyhood later, too,
I can hear the quiet
Things you said
When you gave me to the sandman . . . .
One thing you didn't tell me,
Tho' I asked you with my eyes—
You didn't tell me
When I'd leave
That land
Of only dying frogs . . . .

Toni Cooper

ON FILLING OUT AN APPLICATION FOR COLLEGE

By Toni Cooper

March is here, and with a start you realize that your future is as uncertain as Harry Truman's. Here you've been sitting, conjuring up rosy visions of yourself as Sigma Xi's most ravishing sweetheart, while your application for Podunk University has been lying neglected in some obscure corner of the desk, blank as the mind of a senior during a McClellan special.

Feverishly you dive for the desk and pull out a creased printed form. You proceed to fill it out laboriously, pausing only to look up the spelling of "Bartholomew" in your yearbook. In a half hour you're almost finished. You have given the name of your Aunt Priscilla's canary and all the other vital information Podunk needs to estimate your fitness for college.

But wait! You mustn't forget number 54. This simple little question asks for an autobiographical sketch. All you have to do is describe your background, family life, qualifications for college, personality, good points, bad points, outlook on life, reasons for choosing Podunk, extra-curricular activities, and anything else which will help "the Committee" to understand you—all in 66 and two-thirds words or less.

You gulp and do what you usually do in difficult situations—run to Father. Overjoyed at the opportunity to declaim on his favorite subject, Papa grins, almost dislodging his upper plate, and proceeds to list your defects one by one. Timidly you interrupt with a query as to your good points. The wrinkles in your father's brow become deeper. A half hour later he comes out with the brilliant observation that you're "fairly healthy." Thanking him profusely, you flee.

Back at your desk, you realize that you must decide between the truth or imagination. Since bluffing comes naturally, you try the latter first. Why do you wish to go to college? Why, in order to understand the complex world of today, of course. You are motivated by an urgent desire to learn to appreciate our cultural heritage. Family life? Your home is calm, tranquil . . . (at this point your brother charges in, giving Indian war whoops at the top of his voice. You throw your chemistry book at him and quietly continue). You are a loyal member of the Esperanto Club. Your parents are extremely intellectual . . . (at this moment your father is engrossed in Dick Tracy, and Portia is Facing Life bravely on the kitchen radio). You are honest, industrious, intelligent . . .

NO! NO! This will never do. There's a limit to what "the Committee" will swallow. Perhaps you'd better try honesty. You want to go to college so you won't have to work and to get out of your house. You chose Podunk because it needs students enough to accept even you, and because the ratio of boys to girls is decidedly in your favor. The only meeting of the Esperanto Club you ever attended was the one at which pictures were taken for the yearbook. You are lazy, spoiled, ignorant . . .

Nope. This is even worse. You must compromise. You should be modest, but your good points must predominate. You reach for a fresh sheet of paper, sharpen your pencil, and begin—to bite your nails. Into the kitchen you ramble for a cookie to fortify yourself with.

Three hours, four fingernails, and eight cookies later, you've finished the first paragraph. If the inspiration and the cookies last, you might even finish someday.

And if you don't — well, there's always Woolworth's!

WHY DID I PICK HER?

By James Polk

James Polk

Bob Gawrsh is what is known as a good kid. He's a little under six feet and has black hair and blue eyes. He owns good features, slightly sprinkled with that curse of adolescence, acne. Very slightly, you understand, but in his mirror it looks ten times worse than it is. He wavers between an A and B average in his subjects, and although he is no star, he plays basketball without falling all over his feet—at least most of the time. Socially, Bob is well-liked, especially by the fellows. He spends most of his waking hours noticing girls, although he thinks they don't notice him.

This self-centered specimen of young, maturing boyhood even esteems a certain few females above others. He has even taken them, one at a time, up to the Strand on what he considers were supreme moments in his life.

It is now Tuesday evening of the week four weeks since his last date, and his beating heart is beginning to yearn for feminine companionship. Being extremely curious, as are all normal, healthy youngsters, we'll listen in on him and see if we can look into the turnings-over of his alleged mind. Bob is sitting at one end of the living-room couch. The telephone is on the table close at hand, where he can hang it up quickly if necessary. The family is out, and Bob is trying to get courage to call someone while he still has some privacy. His thoughts, some spoken and some silent, run like this:

"There's Joan, and there's Anne, and there's Helen; I don't know whom to ask first. Joan's the most fun, but she probably has a date. Twice before when I asked, she was busy. After that I called up at seven o'clock on a Monday, before anyone else could have asked. Still she had a date. I'd like to take Sally out, but she might not even know who I am. Maybe later on. I'll call Anne again. I called her last night, but she wasn't home; at least no one answered. Maybe I should have let the phone ring more than once before I hung up. Last week when I asked her out, she said she was babysitting. I wonder if she really was. Probably. Why would she lie to me? Maybe she doesn't want to go out with me at all. I don't see why not. I'll bet she doesn't go out with anyone else."

Meanwhile, Bobby has the phone book on his lap and is idly leafing through it. He has accidentally crumpled a few pages.

"If I ask Anne again this week, she'll think I'm chasing her. Well, I am. No, I'm not. There are plenty of girls. Yes, I am. I'd be lucky to get her. I'm not. Why should I chase her? Well, I guess maybe I am at that. Not this week, though. She's probably out anyway, just like she was last night. She goes out almost every night in the week—with the girls, I think.

"I'll call up Helen. I'd better hurry up and do something. I've sat here and wasted twenty minutes. I've got a lot of homework. Homework'll have to wait; this is more important. What's Helen's number? 7328-J. I'll look it up again to make sure. I better fix these pages before Mom comes home. Well, here goes."

With a surge of effort and a rock in the bottom of his stomach, Bob quickly seizes the menacing black instrument at his side. "Number please." He hangs up. He grabs it again. "Number please."

"7328-J. What shall I say to her? I shouldn't have called yet. Maybe she's still eating."

Ring.

"Hi, Helen. This is Bob. What are you doing Friday night? No. I won't give her a chance to say she's busy."

Ring.

"Hello, Helen. There's a swell picture up at the . . ."

Ring. "Hello."

"Is—uh—Helen there?"

"This is Helen."

"Oh. This is Bob Gawrsh. I was wondering—uh—there's a picture playing at the Strand this weekend. Could — uh — would you like to go?"

"Bob? Gosh, I'd love to, but Daddy's taking me to New York, and then the next night I have to babysit. I'm awfully sorry."

"Oh, uh, well."

Just at this time Bob's family arrives and various brothers and sisters troop into the living-room. Bob is dimly and dispairingly aware of them as he listens to Helen.

She says, "Have you done the English homework yet? Isn't it terrible?"

"Yes, that is, no. I haven't started it yet. I guess I better go and start it now. Well, I'll see you."

"All right, don't work too hard."

"So long." Bob slowly replaces the receiver, everlastingly convinced in his mind that Helen isn't going to New York and that she despises him wholeheartedly. "I hope there is a good picture this week. I wonder what it is. I'll be there with the rest of the fellows—the dateless ones, that is."

P.S. Helen had a wonderful time in New York. All the fellows enjoyed the picture immensely. Bob never once thought of a girl during the whole show, and it cost him just half as much to see it.

THE TIGER CHASE

by Paul Halback

Paul Halback

On the coast of India a small sailing ship, bound for Bombay about ten miles farther along the coast, was wrecked. Jim and Jack, the only survivors of the ship, had to swim to safety. After they reached the shore, Jim said, "We better find a place to sleep before it gets dark. The sun is beginning to set."

The boys found a small clearing a little way in the jungle and decided to stay there for the night. Trying to sleep, Jim heard a slight noise in the bushes behind him. He turned around. Seeing two big green eyes of a tiger staring straight at him, he let out a yell. The boys saw that the tiger was ready to spring at them. Jack noticed an old barrel behind him and hurriedly picked it up. He tipped it, catching the leaping tiger inside. Quickly they turned the barrel upside down and both boys sat on top. Jim reached his hand through a hole in the top of the old barrel, caught hold of the tiger's tail, pulled it through the hole at the top of the old barrel, and tied a big knot in it. Just at that moment the tiger, furiously jumping around inside, threw the barrel over, knocking the boys to the ground. The boys then ran for their lives, but luckily the tiger couldn't pursue them with the barrel on his tail. The next day the boys hiked to Bombay where they got a ship back home.

About a year later the two sailors happened to be on another ship going along the same coast where they had been ship-wrecked. A little farther along the coast Jim exclaimed, "Look! There is the same tiger with the barrel—and four little tigers behind him, each with a little barrel on his tail!"

IN THE HANDS OF SCIENCE

By Lee Ellis

Lee Ellis

Smiling contentedly, he picked up the test tube and held it up to the light. So far, so good. For three years now he had been developing the formula that would make him famous—the formula for creating living protoplasm. Other scientists had tried and failed, but he, Edward Marlowe, would succeed, for he knew what they didn't: Man could not hope to produce animal or plant life already known to earth; it must be a form of life completely new to this planet. Using this as his basis, he had worked out the formula, had obtained the ingredients, had the conditions all ready, and now he would know if he had been right.

Carefully he deposited the contents of the test tube into the opening of a large machine that stood in the middle of the floor. Quickly snapping the lid down over the hole, he walked around to the other side of the machine and consulted a chart taped to it. Then he bent over the instrument panel, his hands deftly turning knobs and setting control dials. At last he stepped aside, took a deep breath, and pulled a lever to the right of the panel. Immediately the rays and crossrays inside the machine started acting the seconds away . . . 5 . . . 4 . . . 3 . . . 2 . . . 1. When the machine had given a last shudder, he reset the timer for the hour necessary for the rays to neutralize themselves and sat down.

Suddenly he sat erect and listened. What was that noise? Cautiously he rose and walked back around the machine. His eyes studied the machine for a second and then he gave a gasp of horror! The lid over the hole in which he had put the material was slowly disappearing. A small pale green ooze appeared in the hole. It got bigger and bigger, but Marlowe just stood there, frozen to the spot. When the gelatin-like substance was completely free, it dropped to the floor and quivered hesitantly for a moment. Then, its "mind" apparently made up, it started flowing, amoeba fashion, to the white rat cage. Helplessly fascinated, Marlowe remained rooted to the floor, his eyes following his creation. There was a horrible screeching and he shut his eyes against it. When he opened them, the cage was empty save for a pale, shivering mass. Only then did he fully grasp the situation, and fear clutched his heart with icy fingers. Running to the door, he turned the knob and pulled, but it wouldn't open. "I've got to get it open," he thought wildly and began banging on it desperately. But is was futile. He spun around, and there at his feet lay the shimmering mass of life. Feeling a horrible burning sensation on the soles of his feet, he fell back into the corner. "My feet," he thought, "I can't feel them any more!" The shocking pain slowly crawled up him with an awful agony . . . he shrieked, and then suddenly everything went black . . . .

CONDITIONS OF THE SOCIAL SYSTEM (1974)

by Alan Jarnagin

Alan Jarnagin

"Haa! Haa!" laughed Miss Pruneface as the first unsuspecting victim arose from his position in order to sharpen his pencil, a diabolical instrument clutched in his small, grubby paw. No longer would she tolerate the meshing of gears or the deafening outcry of the premasticated wood as it ran the gauntlet.

Before passing judgment on "Pruney's" following actions, I feel that you are in need of a brief history about the person to whom this report is dedicated.

It seemed that the old gal was a pedagogue of the horn-book era who did not approve of students assassinating teachers at the alarming rate of today. Not knowing the modern approach, she was annoyed by students who feathered the band-ends of their sharpened pencils so that they might be thrown in the manner of spears.

Having chosen her course of action, "Pruney" stood up and marched past the pencil-punched bulletin board behind her desk toward the dank, musty corner of the room where the fiendish little student was about to plunge his weapon into the yawning chasm through which had passed many of the most infamous tools of destruction. A dead silence hung over the still air.

There was a blood-curdling scream, followed by diabolical laughter. Again the faculty had triumphed over the elements!

SOUP'S ON

By Walter Patterson

Walter Patterson

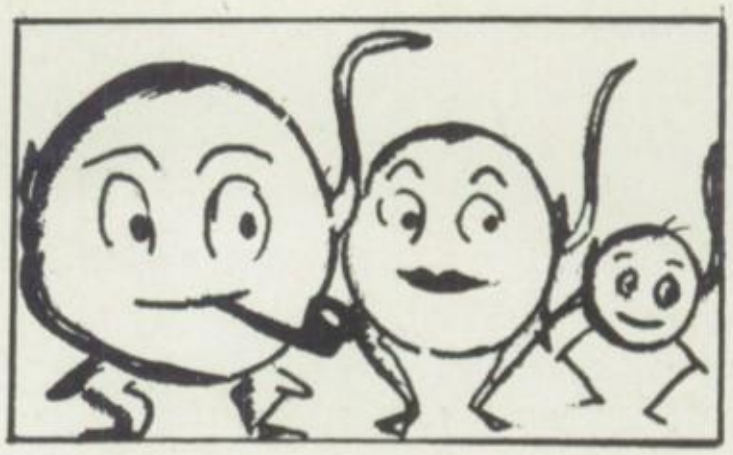
All are tense and silent in the large classroom, straining at their seats but remaining stationary as if held by some large magnet. All eyes are focused on the clock. Suddenly there is a click which is barely audible, but everyone is shooting out of the door and down the hall as the bell begins to ring. The race is on.

Rounding the corner of the corridor, any unfortunate person coming in the opposite direction is trampled by the oncoming mob. At the far end stands Mr. Dilson, looking for prospective members of the track team and calling back the exceptionally fast ones to ask them if they would mind coming in after school to try out for the one hundred yard dash. At the last bend all skid to a stop as the piercing glance of Mr. Bogart, who has had extensive training secret service work, mob control, and pest extermination, brings them to a gentle walk.

The line is not too long, but you slowly move backwards as a certain small group of two hundred boys tries to sneak past Mr. Bogart. Of course most of them don't make it, but, still, at least thirty have been successful. The line moves slowly amid chaos and confusion as the unfortunate late comers from the room of some nasty teacher who kept them three seconds after the bell are still trying to crawl in unnoticed.

At last the race is over. Panting, scarred, and bruised, you pick up your tray and silver (a loose term used to describe eating implements). Then comes the reward. What! Oh no! Not again! Yes, it's true: stewed tomatoes, macaroni, and those apples!

Richard Leamer



THE ETERNAL CALL OF PISCES

By Richard Leamer

As you may know, Pisces is the twelfth sign of the Zodiac and a constellation up in the starry skies which is supposed to look like two fish to those more enlightened souls who can see pictures in the heavens. But what is not commonly known is that Pisces is also one of the lesser gods who is supposed to rule over the piscatory denizens of Neptune's realm. Therefore, I believe you could say that Pisces is the god at whose altar all true fishermen burn their incense. In my own mind, Pisces represents a great many things, ranging from a beautiful, babbling, woodland stream on a hot summer day, to a cold, dark, foreboding hole cut through the ice into what seems to be another world.

Fishermen, like almost any group, may be divided into a great many types; but for the purposes of succinctness, I shall deal only with what I term the two main divisions. They are the transitory or seasonal fisherman and the true or perpetual fisherman, who is constantly hearing and heeding the call of Pisces. It is with the second group that this little treatise mainly concerns itself, but I feel that it is probably necessary to tell a small bit about the first division just to clarify my reasons for distinction.

The transitory or seasonal fisherman, as I choose to call him, is just what his name implies, a person to whom fishing represents no more than a seasonal urge to don his traditional garb and sally forth to the fish. You can usually tell the person with only a casual interest in fishing very easily. He is most often found near a city, and usually in the spring or early summer of the year, although this last does not always hold true because the "urge" is able to strike at any time of the year, but, like love, it seems to hit the hardest in the spring. Also, he likes to have the fanciest clothes and most expensive equipment available. These things are a dead giveaway, because if you examine him carefully, you will probably find that there are no patches on his waders or boots, his rod is still shiny with the original varnish ,and his flybox is cluttered up with truck of the most idiotic sort. But this type of fisherman is not a nuisance long, for he quickly tires of the sport and soon retires to his domicile, where he hangs up his equipment, still with hardly a scratch on it, and awaits the next transitory desire, which is not likely to return for another year.

The true fisherman is fundamentally a different sort of character, even though you may not be able to tell him from the less desirable type at first. His all-pervading passion for the art of angling stems from a deep, firm-rooted love of piscatory following, which is seldom assumed. In fact, I feel that no one can be a true worshipper of Pisces unless there is a quality for the love of fishing born in him. You may meet this passion in the barefoot farm boy with an alder pole, a piece of twine for a line, and a bent pin for a hook, just as easily as you can find it in a typical Abercrombie and Fitch angler, although the latter's equipment is likely to look as if it has undergone a great deal of use.

The true piscator's fishing is rarely confined to one season of the year unless he is unfortunate enough to be located in an environment which does not present many opportunities for fishing. In this case he has two courses of action open to him. The first, and perhaps the most drastic, is to throw over his job and move to a place where he can satisfy the inherent longing in his soul; or else he can gradually nurse up a large size frustration by constantly reading stories of phenomenal fishing places, endlessly going over and improving his tackle, and just by yearning to be out on the water again.

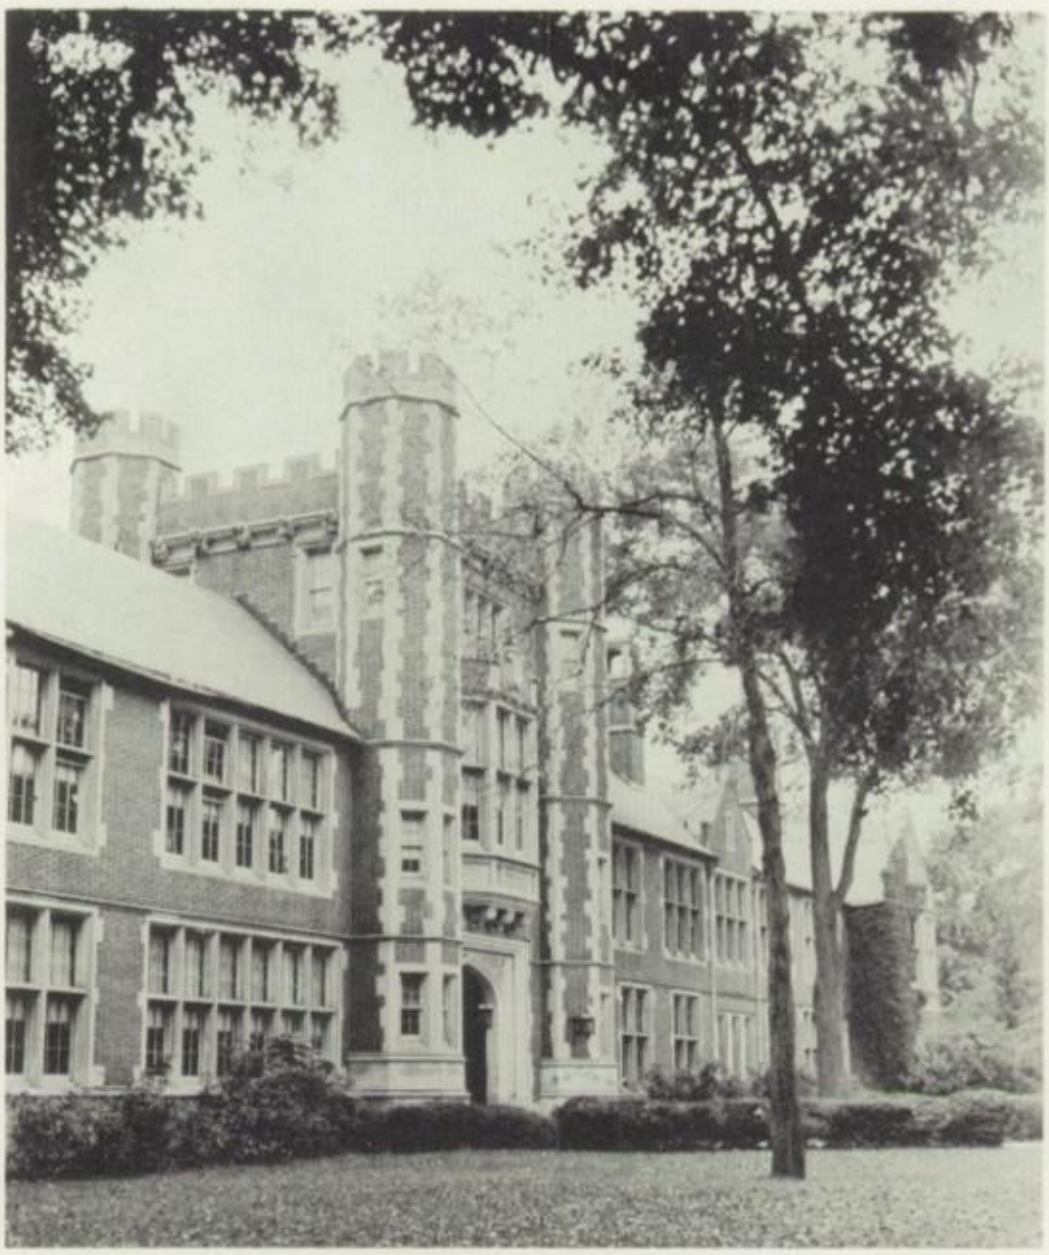
In the spring of year a fisherman's thought turn naturally to landlocked salmon and trout of various types. These fish are most active and most easily caught just after the ice breaks up and goes out in the spring. Casting with a fly or spoon or trolling a lure up and down the lake for salmon or trout gives a great many fishermen a thrill of the "chase" which is virtually impossible to describe.

As the year progresses into summer, the piscator's quarry switches, quite often, to bass, northern pike, and catfish, to name just a few. He may choose to fish in almost any manner: float fishing, trolling, casting, bobber fishing, or any other way he desires, but the important thing is there: he is deriving the intense, soul-satisfying pleasure that only the true fisherman can possess, even if he doesn't catch anything.

With the advent of fall, the most common fish caught are the various pan fish, walleyes, perch, smallmouth bass, and trout. The angler's method of taking these fish is again trivial, while the important things remain, just a little changed from the other seasons, a crisp smell in the air, a huge harvest moon, an occasional chilly breeze in the morning and evening, and above all else, the deep emotions that are found by all true followers of Izaac Walton.

During the period of time between the end of autumn and the winter freeze up, the fisherman's attention may temporarily wander, but the thoughts of fish are still lurking in his subconscious mind, and may easily be brought out front by the sight of a favorite fly rod or lure. As soon the ice is hard enough to support his weight, the fisherman is out there rapidly chipping out a hole with his heavy spud. Soon his tip-ups are set, and he can sit back to wait for the tell-tale flag which signifies the beginning of the end for some unwary togue, perch, pike, or pickerel. The same as at any other time of the year, the true follower of Pisces is constantly kept alert by strange thrills of anticipation which no one but a true fisherman can know.

Even a seasonal fisherman can experience a little of the thrill that comes with fishing, but it is only for the true fisherman (occassionally called a fishing bug or nut) to know the acme of the deepest emotions that abide in the Eternal Call of Pisces!



The time has finally come when we, the Class of 1952, must bid farewell to Summit High School. Believe me, it is not an easy thing to do. To some of us it has seemed like three years of constant toil; to some others, a maze of strange, unknown roads, each in turn waiting to be explored. We will not soon forget the dances, the parties, the clubs, or the sports which Summit High School has offered to us along with the all-important studies. We are deeply grateful for all the kindness and understanding shown to us by our teachers. It has been like a small community, each one of us an important citizen. Now that we are prepared to venture forth into a larger scale community, we must use the knowledge and wisdom we have gathered in these recent years. Some of us are bound for further education, some for the business world; but wherever we are and whatever we're doing, we'll never forget our alma mater—Summit High School!

Truly, this is America . . . Saturday Night!

"The feature picture? Starts about nine. Pretty good, too." "I see Dr. Henry is still in his office."

Yes . . . that's Main . . . where Elm runs into it. And that's main stream of our national life where the products of the field, factory and laboratory funnel through the shops to the homes of the happiest — and healthiest — people on earth.

Their good health is no accident. It is part of our national design . . . product of the world's top standard of living, and the newest in medical knowledge.

Thanks to the community physician, there is no gap between the medical laboratories and the health needs of Main and Elm. The American practitioner, trained in freedom's tradition and alert to the new, sees to that. He is the bridge between the laboratory and the patient's beside.

More . . . he is a member of that great profession . . . the physician . . . on whose initiative depends the interchange of medical experience between himself and his colleagues.

In the scientific Ciba Laboratories at Summit, New Jersey, we produce many of the fine pharmaceuticals of today. But even our medical scientists would be helpless in bringing their discoveries to bear on the national health—were is not for the practitioner's spirit of free inquiry . . . unfettered initiative.
